

Talking Wellness: Cards for Cancer can help you reach out to someone you care about.

Welcome to Talking Wellness: Cards for Cancer. If someone you care about has cancer, you may be at a loss for words. You want to reach out and be supportive, but you may not know how. With Talking Wellness: Cards for Cancer, you can reach out to people with cancer and provide words of comfort. Something as simple as a card and your personal message can help remind people that they're not alone. The free electronic greeting cards featured here offer words of hope and encouragement to help those with cancer better cope with the disease and the side effects of chemotherapy.

select an eCard:

home

send an eCard

learning about cancer

coping with side effects

resources and tools

"be strong"

Anthony Robbins, Inspirational Author and Life Coach

A diagnosis of cancer can cause even the most independent person to experience a loss of control. Encourage someone coping with cancer to feel more in control of their life. Send these words of empowerment and strength.

Send this eCard

"look within"

Deepak Chopra, Author and Speaker

Having cancer can be very isolating. Help someone feel more hopeful. By connecting with others and with oneself, a person with cancer may find strength and a sense of well-being. Send these words of support and inner peace.

Send this eCard

"eat well"

Michael Lomonaco, Chef

Some of the side effects of cancer treatment may be nausea, vomiting and a loss of appetite. During this time it is important to keep up strength by eating well. Send these words of encouragement and hope.

Send this eCard

Each card has been written by a celebrity—and illustrated by an artist—some of whom have been touched by cancer. These celebrities and artists have donated their time and creativity to Talking Wellness: Cards for Cancer. Send a card to offer support to someone you care about.

Sponsored by the wellness community with support from Merck & Co., Inc.